The American Revolution: Decision in North America
The American Revolution showed that military strategy is vital to revolution. One side made better use of the idea.

by Joseph Miranda

The Battle of Stirling Bridge: Braveheart’s Triumph
In 1297 William Wallace led a Scottish army to victory over a previously undefeated English force, but it was a tactical triumph lacking strategic result.

by John Walker

The Battle of Mukden: A Strategic & Tactical Analysis
The rising empire of Japan defeated the Russians in what was then the largest land battle ever fought.

by David R. Higgins

Task Force Viking: A Model for US Interventions
In northern Iraq in 2003, US Special Forces (with local forces) tied down a far larger concentration of Iraqi units.
