Triumph of the West:
Lepanto, 7 October 1571
In 1571 a coalition of often-mutually-hostile Western nations defeated the Ottoman navy in the waters of southern Greece. Our analysis explains why that victory was critical and how it almost didn't happen.
by Robert J. Cowling

The Poles in World War I:
At the start of WWI there was no independent country of Poland in existence. This is the story of how the Poles of that time fought, on both sides of the war, to change that situation.
by Maciej Jonasz

Analysis: The Mau Mau Uprising
The Mau Mau uprising was in many ways unique among colonial rebellions of the 20th century. Our analysis explains how those characteristics brought about its defeat by the British.
