FEATURES

6 North Cape
Battles in the Arctic, 1941-1945
German control of Norway and the Allies’ need to ship supplies to the Soviet Union forced both sides to fight for domination of the inhospitable northern sea.
by Javier Romero

18 Mercenary Warfare in the Congo
The newly independent Democratic Republic of the Congo, like so many former African colonies in the early 1960s, was ridden with internal strife. Cold-War politics drew superpower proxies into the struggle, with mercenaries leading the way.
by Joseph Miranda

33 Waterloo
A single dramatic battle decided the course of European history in the Nineteenth Century, and cemented the ideal of a decisive, war-winning battle into the minds of soldiers for generations to come.
by Christopher Perello

50 First Punic War
Rome’s Rise to Imperium
The first of three wars with Carthage initiated a century that saw Rome transformed from a regional power to dominance of the western Mediterranean and set it on the road to empire.
by Brian Todd Carey
