6 Fight the Fall
Roman Military Operations in the Era of Theodosius, Alaric and Flavius Stilicho. AD 378 to 410

In AD 376, a coalition of Germanic tribes approached officials of the Eastern Roman Empire, requesting permission to settle in the lands south of the Danube river. The Gothic migration appeared to be manageable for the Empire, but it initiated a chain of events that led to a century of warfare and the event known to historians as the Fall of Rome in 476.

24 Gunpowder Weapons in the Wars of the Roses

The Wars of the Roses were an interconnected, yet separate, set of conflicts fought in England from 1455 to 1485 between the House of Lancaster and the House of York over who would control the English Crown. The deployment and use of gunpowder weapons became more important as the Wars went on.

30 The Apache Wars, 1849–1886

The Apache Wars were fought between the US Army and various Apache bands in the American Southwest and northern Mexico from 1849 to 1886. The Apache and Anglo-Americans coexisted uneasily until the arrival of an influx of gold miners and settlers. Then, internecine warfare spread throughout the southwestern frontier.

48 Helicopter Air-To-Air Combat

Air combat involving helicopters has been sporadic, but this may not be the case in future conflicts. Today, almost every military force is equipped with some type of helicopter used for surveillance, attack, transport, and supporting peacekeeping operations.
